TEQUILA & MEZCAL FLIGHTS

The Highlands of Tequila range from 6000 to 7200 feet in elevation and towns that represent this area are Arandes and Atotonilco to name a few. With red iron rich soil these agaves have more residual sugar and grow larger though there is less rain the roots grow deep which makes the plants work hard for their flavor. These tequilas often have flavors of minerality, spice, citrus, green peppers and overall are more delicate.

SILVER HIGHLAND FLIGHT $12 El Tesoro Platinum, Casamigos, Espolon

The lowlands of Jalisco range from 2,600 to 4,500 feet in elevation. This is where Tequila was born... in the Town of Tequila. Amatitan is another lowland town producing tequila. Lowland tequilas tend to be earthy, spicy, vegetal with low acidity and are often herbaceous.

SADO LOWLAND FLIGHT $14 Casa Noble, Revolucion, Cabo

Tequila is made from the Blue Weber Agave. Once cooked, usually in a traditional Brick Steam Oven called an orno, it is then either shredded or crushed with a large volcanic stone called a Tahona.

This next flight is made up of tequila that incorporate the Tahona method

AÑEJO FLIGHT $16 El Tesoro, Olmeca Altos, Roca Patrón

We have chosen three of our favorite tequilas that represent three agestatments. Siver aged up to 60 days, sado aged from 60 days to 1 year and an Anejo, aged from 1 year to 3 years.
